Association PROGRAM

Throughout the United States there is a growing concern about the high costs of long term care and the effects these costs can have on financial security, retirement planning, and quality of family life.

In response to this concern, many associations have endorsed a long term care insurance program for the benefit of their members.

What Is Long Term Care?

Long Term Care is assistance provided for those who have a physical or mental disability and need help with daily living activities. These services often begin with care at home, followed by a range of care facilities. The risk of needing such care is greater than many people realize. Research indicates that one in two¹ Americans will need long term care at some time in their life. Today, more than 12 million Americans receive long term care services, with more than 40% being of working age.¹

"We have been solicited by a variety of long term care insurance providers asking us to endorse their products for our membership. It was immediately apparent to us that AIMS was head and shoulders above the competition when it came to trust and personal attention. We were honestly surprised when they let us know that we didn't have to sign a multi-year contract with them. They wanted us to be comfortable in the fact that we were partners in this endeavor. That kind of attitude has made all the difference and we know that it will carry over into the relationships they establish with our members."

Oklahoma Public Employees Association

Importantly, long term care can be very expensive, often costing thousands of dollars each month, and the need for care may last for years. These high costs may affect the financial security of many families, as most long term care expenses are paid with personal or family assets. Neither traditional medical insurance nor Medicare was designed to pay for these services.

Long term care insurance is designed to help during these situations by providing care management services, paying for care in a variety of settings including home care, and helping protect family assets. Experts advise individuals to consider this coverage if they have assets of $50,000 (not counting home or automobile).¹ Yet, only 5% of individuals over age 50 have this important coverage.²

"Several years ago, we offered long term care to Florida Bar Members through another carrier. Although the actual program was solid, the marketing was not. Today, with AIMS' assistance, The Florida Bar has a very successful long term care program for its members. Within a matter of weeks of being affiliated with AIMS we saw the program begin to flourish, and after only three years this program has reached a stage that we never would have dreamed. AIMS is a top notch organization and I would recommend them to anyone!"
